Elk Point REVIEW

ELMER THE SAFETY ELEPHANT was a big hit with the youngsters at the Elk Point FCSS Information Night last Tuesday at the Elks Hall, handing out jumbo-sized hugs along with safety tips.

Everyone and their elephant attends Information Night

A total of 38 community groups, agencies and service providers profiled their programs and activities at Elk Point's annual Information Night last Tuesday. The Elks Hall was packed to the doors with Elk Point and district residents of all ages, who were able to register for minor hockey or a Further Ed course, find out how to join the Elks Lodge or a church youth group, learn about electrical safety or how to become a foster parent, pick up a tourist guide or two, AND meet a cheerful and cuddly elephant, all in one location.

Elmer the Safety Elephant was this year's special guest, and was surrounded by an admiring throng of youngsters throughout his visit. He brought along a variety of safety-related stickers and games, to remind the kids to stay safe all year round.

Information on everything from quitting smoking to dealing with farm stress, finding a day home for preschoolers to taking a hike down the Iron Horse Trail, was available to viewers who also admired the handsome Red Cross quilts, checked out the latest arrivals on the library shelves and enjoyed a cup of coffee and a doughnut courtesy of the FCSS, who organized the well-attended event.

Most of the displays also offered the opportunity to enter draws, and viewers left with everything from a fruit basket to a remote controlled toy, with one lucky entrant even taking home their own small version of Elmer.

Town Council examines playgrounds' potential

Elk Point Town Council took a first-hand look at local public playgrounds on Thursday afternoon, checking out the condition of playground equipment in preparation for decisions on the future of the sites.

At their September 9 meeting Council decided that they should see what was safe and what was not, prior to budgeting for new equipment. Councillor Parrish Tung urged Council to "either make an effort [to keep the sites in safe and usable condition] or take them out." Councillor Dwayne Vogel lives in the north end neighborhood which has a community-built park which is maintained by a work bee once a year. He noted an occasional problem with slivers from the wood structures, but said the site is in good condition despite the creators "never having access to playground quality equipment."

Elk Point Elks Lodge Exalted Ruler Albert Boratynec joined Council for a look at the Elks Playground, and a trio of parents also went along to help check out the condition of the equipment.

THIS HORSE HAS GONE ITS LAST MILE was the consensus of opinion when Elk Point Town Council met with Elks Lodge leader Albert Boratynec to check out the equipment in the Elks Playground. Left to right: Mayor Lyle Frisby, Boratynec, and Town Councillors Dwayne Vogel and Bernice Capjack-Hugo.

Community rallies in wake of Seniors' Centre fire

Since Monday, September 8, when the Elk Point Seniors' Recreation Centre was extensively damaged by fire, the community has rallied around the Pioneer Circle with offers of assistance.

"So many people have been so involved," says Pioneer Circle president Margaret Modin. The Centre's custodian Sherry Young called 911 just before noon that day and reported smoke in the billiard room at the north end of the centre. "Sherry acted very quickly and the fire department responded almost instantly." Quick action also came from Victor Stepa at Elk Point Insurance, who "had the wheels turning on Monday, and had an inspector here on Tuesday."

Both the Elk Point Baptist Church and Elk Point United Church offered facilities for storage, and several truckloads of files have been tucked away in the FCSS Office basement, thanks to firefighters Lyle Frisby, Ken Palamarek, Jay McNeill and Pat Demers, who helped to rescue the files from the building. They also removed all the plaques, paintings and memorabilia from the hall and large conference room, and Mrs. Modin said she heaved a sigh of relief when she found the Alberta Senior Citizens Sports and Recreation Association's (ASCSRA) huge challenge plaque was safe.

While repairs to the building will take an estimated five to six months, Mrs. Modin is "much encouraged" since she saw the condition of items rescued from the building. "We may even be able to save the pool table. It was covered with plastic, and although there was water sitting on it, the slate is undamaged. The shuffleboard was unscathed, and can be cleaned up... many things can be."

There was "a minimum of damage in the conference room and the big room, we will be able to save lots," she added. "All the kitchen equipment and furniture will be taken to Edmonton for cleaning and storage, and it's comforting to know it will be in safekeeping." While the Centre is undergoing repairs, the seniors are looking for a temporary home. "If we can get a facility, we will keep on with [all our programs] but the rentals," Mrs. Modin said. "We hope to get things going as soon as we can. As much as possible, we will keep things going." The Elk Point Elementary School gym has already been booked for the ASCSRA banquet later this month and the Pioneer Circle's annual Christmas party.

Council surveys the town's playgrounds

With the Alberta Urban Municipalities Association convention coming up this week, Council went over a variety of the topics which will be discussed, from SuperNet to gas franchise agreements. They discussed the pros and cons of energy audits, and decided the water treatment plant might benefit from an audit of this sort.

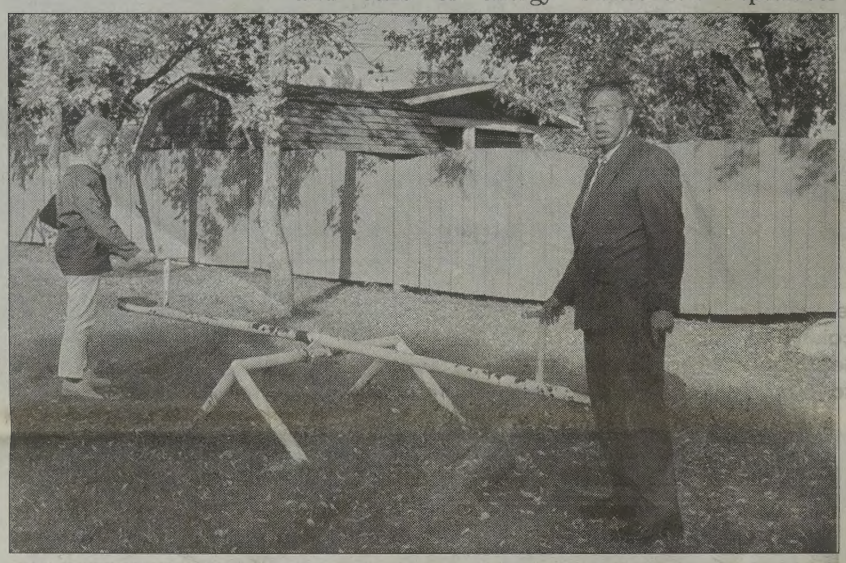
Council will be represented at a September 25 meeting with the County of St. Paul regarding the 2004 Provincial Agriculture Service Board Tour.

A workshop on the Alberta Injury Control Strategy is slated for October 3 in St. Paul, with Public Works manager Ron Fraess recommended to attend if possible.

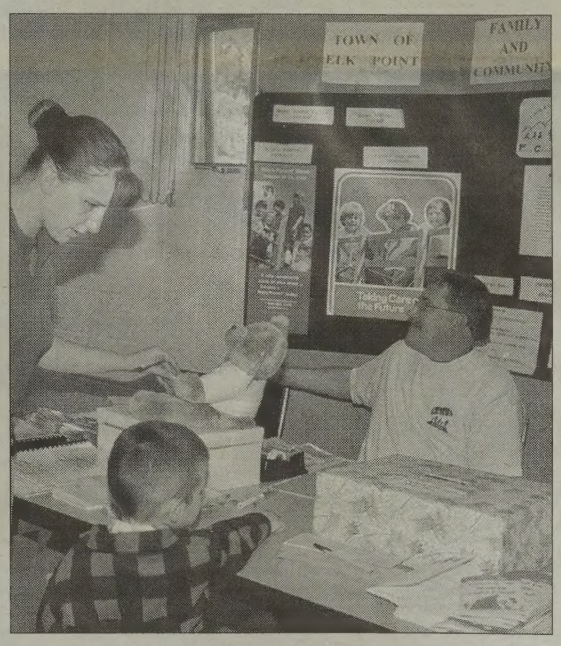
Council agreed to a request from the Public Works committee to purchase a self-feeding power snake with an attachment capable of cutting tree roots, to better enable them to clear plugged sewer lines.

Approval was given to pay expenses incurred in repairs to Ravine Drive, spraying of toad flax on the former railway line and in the recently annexed area, and the Phase 2 upgrade at the water treatment plant/.

Mayor Lyle Frisby proclaimed October 6 to 12 as Fire Prevention Week and October 14 to 20 as Canada's Citizenship Week in Elk Point.



TOO TOTTERY TO TEETER was the verdict on this teeter-totter, checked out by councillors Bernice Capjack-Hugo and Parrish Tung. Teeter-totters are no longer allowed in playgrounds because of safety issues.



FCSS BOARD MEMBER John Kulig manned the FCSS table at Information Night last Tuesday, and encouraged everyone to enter the draws.

More students choose area schools

By Todd MacKay
St. Paul Journal

It's hard to measure success in education, but the school board has found one good indicator. There are 138 more students in the St. Paul Education Regional Division than projected, according to figures presented at the school board meeting last Wednesday.

Glen Avon enrollment saw the largest rise in the division, with 38 more students, but Racette also rose by 33, followed by Ashmont Secondary at 34, and Heinsburg at 17.

Superintendent of schools Doug Yeo congratulated teachers, principals and board trustees at the board meeting for building a system more parents and students want to be a part of.

Normally numbers decline as the year progresses so Yeo expects the population may fall by as many as 90 or 100.

Elk Point Parent Nursery needs your help to survive!

By Lynn Berg
Elk Point Parent Nursery

Elk Point Parent Nursery has been around for over 20 years and is now in danger of closing down due to lack of interest and poor membership. Parent Nursery is a non-profit group whose purpose is to provide an environment where moms and dads (or other caregivers) with newborns, toddlers and preschoolers up to age 5 can socialize with each other through playtime. It also gives the adults an opportunity to meet other families within the community and discuss mutual child development. Parent Nursery is an especially good place for parents new to the community to meet other parents with same age children. It's also a great place to go to get out of the house during those long winter months!

Parent Nursery meets once a week from the end of September until June in the Untied Church Hall from 10:00 a.m. until noon. We offer a semi-structured program that includes snacks, crafts, story-time and room to play! The family fee is only $35 for the year of $3.00 for a drop-in. Pretty cheap entertainment if you ask me!

Attending Parent Nursery has great advantages for young children, such as teaching them how to play together cooperatively, promoting sharing with others, teaching them how to listen in a group environment, helping them do organized activities in a group, and meeting the same age children before they attend school. In the years that I have attended Parent Nursery, I have noticed that most of the children really enjoy themselves once they get to know some of the other kids.

Last year, Parent Nursery's membership was fairly low compared to other years. There were only about 10 regular members and several drop-in families. This year it is looking like about half the members will not be returning. Many families have stopped attending because their children are attending school now, because they have moved out of the Elk Point area, or because of work-related issues. There is a very good possibility Parent Nursery will close its doors if there is not renewed interest in the group and a membership increase.

If you are at all interested in finding out more about Parent Nursery, are planning to attend this year or drop in, or have new ideas or suggestions, please come to our Annual General Meeting in the United Church Hall on Monday, September 23 at 7:00 p.m.

Parent Nursery's future depends on it! Bring a friend!

THERE'S NOTHING LIKE A GOOD BREAKFAST to promote learning, and the Elk Point Co-op was happy to host a Back-to-School pancake breakfast for the students and staff of F. G. Miller High School on Friday, September 6. Here, Bryan Vanwyck and manager Dwayne Odgaard are all set to fill up another heaping plate for a hungry student.

Buckle up or fill out your donor card

That is the message the RCMP and the Lakeland Regional Health Authority's Injury Control Project is sending the motoring public. Seatbelts save lives. It is simple. Seatbelts reduce your risk of fatal injury by 45%. That means it increases your chance of survival by over 50%. Your life is worth it!

Motor vehicle collisions in Alberta are killing too many people. Between the beginning of January 2002 and September 6, 2002 in the Lakeland Health Region, 23 people have died as a result of a motor vehicle collision. In the three previous years, 68 have died. The trend is heading in the wrong direction this year.

Society has to deal with the burden of fatal traffic collisions. If you fill out your donor card, you at least may have a chance of helping someone else. This may give your friends and family some comfort. Be sure to discuss it with them.

Motor vehicle collisions can be prevented. The RCMP and LRHA remind you to drive safely, to buckle up, and if you drink, don't drive. Too many of our fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers and best friends are dying needlessly on our roadways.

Be prepared. Over the next few weeks, the RCMP and LRHA plan to make our roads safer for everyone.

The fine for failing to wear a seatbelt has risen to $69.

Sgt. George Harper of the RCMP NAD Traffic Services says, "to buckle up, or not to buckle up, there is only one answer to this question. Do it."

We miss it already

You've heard the old story: you don't miss the water until the well has gone dry. It's like that with the Elk Point Seniors' Recreation Centre: we had no idea how much we all relied upon that facility until it was no longer available for our use, for meetings, gatherings, sports and recreation of all kinds.

It's not only the senior citizens in our community who have enjoyed this facility throughout its decade of existence. A typical week would see adults from a wide surrounding area packing the hall on Monday night for bingo, an Interagency Health Committee meeting on Tuesday, followed by the afternoon bingo, an oil company safety meeting on Wednesday followed by a seniors' dance on Wednesday night, a floor curling bonspiel on Friday, someone's wedding reception on Saturday and a church service on Sunday. In between there would be card games and billiards and other meetings galore, with perhaps an election forum or an oil company open house thrown in for good measure.

Within hours of last Monday's devastating fire, community groups were wringing their hands. "But where will will we hold our....." meeting/activity/social? they asked themselves. Some, like the Friends of the Forts, were able to relocate an upcoming Fur Trade Ball to the Elks Hall, and the Elementary School made their gymnasium available for the Alberta Senior Citizens Sports and Recreation Association banquet. Others who had planned to use the facility were busy phoning around to find a suitable space to fit their needs, and may, in fact, still be looking. It isn't easy to find the variety of facilities that the Seniors' Centre encompassed - a large hall, and large and small meeting rooms, and all of it wheelchair and handicapped accessible.

The seniors are very grateful to have been offered the use of several other locations that would be suitable for many of their activities, which means that many of their programs will be able to continue while their building is repaired. What they may well miss the most will be the ability to rent their facilities to other groups, and thus bring in revenue to finance their activities. This lack of revenue, added to the expenses sure to occur over and above those covered by the insurance, are almost sure to burden the seniors financially, adding to the multiple stresses caused by the fire itself.

Still, the situation could certainly have been worse, if not for the fast action of the custodian, the fire department and the other volunteers who responded to the emergency. Thanks to all those who helped during the emergency, and those who have helped set the seniors' minds at rest since that time. God willing, repairs will proceed swiftly and we will all once again be enjoying the facilities of the Seniors' Recreation Centre before too long.

Take the DASH to better blood pressure

You may be thinking of a dash as a short race. Of course, physical activity is important to all of us for maintaining health. In this instance, 'dash' refers to a new dietary way to help beat high blood pressure. Research shows an eating plan called Dietary Approaches to Stop Hypertension, or DASH, may help reduce the risk of high blood pressure.

High blood pressure, or hypertension, is one of the leading causes of stroke, heart disease, kidney failure and premature death in this country. Yet one third of Canadians who have it, don't know it - which is why hypertension is called the "silent killer." The only way to find out if you have high blood pressure is through regular monitoring. See your doctor to help you get started.

In a large study funded by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute (NHLBI), the DASH eating plan was shown to be the most effective among plans for lowering blood pressure that were tested. Participants eating three servings of low-fat dairy foods combined with a low-fat diet high in vegetables and fruits experienced a greater reduction in blood pressure than did those who ate a diet high in vegetables and fruits alone.

linda FOX
Registered Dietitian

DASH is a plan that adds foods to your diet rather than taking them away. It's not restrictive and it doesn't require special foods or special instructions. Look no further than your local grocery store for the ingredients for the DASH eating plan.

What exactly is DASH? It's close to Canada's Food Guide to Healthy Eating. The main difference is that, instead of eating the minimum recommended daily servings of vegetables, fruits and milk products, you go for the higher end of recommended daily servings. A moderate fat intake is also recommended.

Basic DASH recommendations include:

- Eat at least 3 servings of low fat dairy products every day
- Eat at least 4 to 5 servings of vegetables every day
- Eat at least 4 to 5 servings of fruit every day
- Limit the amount of fat you eat

Together with the DASH diet, these lifestyle tips help to control your high blood pressure:

- Stop smoking
- Limit alcohol intake
- Lose weight if overweight
- Increase physical activity
- Limit sodium (salt)
- Follow your physician's advice

The DASH eating plan was designed for those with high blood pressure, but is also a heart healthy plan you can share with your family. For a copy of the DASH eating plan for more information, contact Linda Fox, RD at the Elk Point Health Centre.

Mourning the loss of a home

What the seniors never wanted to see happen did take place on Monday, September 9, 2002. A fire damaged the building.

To may seniors in our community of Elk Point, the "Seniors' Centre" had truly become their second home. After all, they had gathered there to take part in many fun, community and learning activities. The building represented their feelings of friendship and love they had developed over the years toward one another. Thus it is easy to understand the feelings of bereavement. Something has been taken away from our seniors and many seniors are mourning the loss of their second home.

As with any home there are neighbors. The neighbors to the Seniors' Centre are our community of Elk Point. There are many good neighbors, as the seniors learned. It is noted that it took only seven minutes after the call was made to 911, to have the volunteer fire department people arrive on the scene. They acted very professionally and did what they knew had to be done. Some of the men had to enter the burning building and turn off what had to be turned off. They

deanna EASTHOPE
from the FCSS desk

were brave and they did what they had to do. Then they carried on with what they had to do in trying to put out the fire. They were fire fighters. A big thank you goes out to our volunteer fire department.

There were other neighbors who came on the scene to help in any way. The RCMP and Town Council were also there as well. Thank you, everyone.

It has been a few days since September 9, the seniors are regrouping and they are looking for another place to meet for awhile. The Seniors Centre is estimated to be repaired in possibly 5 or 6 months.

The plus side of all this is, that no lives were lost. The seniors still have each other and they still have their neighbors. The memories of what took place in the Seniors' Centre before September 9 will be remembered and the beautiful part of all of this is that because no lives were lost, the seniors can still gather together. The home you once knew just needs some time to get fixed and be made well again. So until that happens, remember each other and gather together in a temporary location.

In the ancient Bible story, King Solomon had a dream wherein he was offered any gift he desired. He could have asked for a long life, power over his enemies, or vast riches. Instead, he wanted an "understanding heart." The king seemed to know that real strength is a product of heartfelt compassion. Words need not be spoken. It's conveyed through a thoughtful smile, a heartfelt look, a listening ear, and a warm touch.

So to all the seniors who felt the Seniors' Centre was your second home, please accept from your neighbors - the community of Elk Point - our heartfelt compassion at this time in the loss of your second home. We hope your home has a speedy recovery.

All systems go - Muni-Corr gets county's approval

By Michelle Huley
St. Paul Journal

A regional multi-use trail is a step closer to becoming reality as the Muni-Corr can begin developing the recreational system.

County of St Paul Council approved the development application following a public hearing on the issue last week. About six people came to the hearing to listen or speak to the issue, zoned direct control under the county's land use bylaw.

"We've been through a lot," said county resident Marvin Bjornstad of the lengthy legal and public hearing the Muni-Corr has undergone in the past three years. He said he has been involved with the Iron Horse trail, which runs from Elk Point to Heinsburg. "I've been on parts of that trail and talked to a number of the adjacent landowners, and received no complaints.

"We're trying to do everything we can," he said in regards to working with adjacent landowners. "We've done three to four times as much work off the trail (as on it). We have a huge job ahead of us, but still, it's coming together quite well.

"There's a lot of people out there who want to see it go ahead."

Not all residents who appeared at the hearing were in favour of the development, however. Adjacent landowner Charonne Regan questioned the process by which the trail system has been approved.

"What is transpiring here?" she asked of the direct control requirement.

Reeve Robert Bouchard, who stepped down from chairing the meeting due to his position as president of the Muni-Corr board, explained. He said because the issue has been controversial in the public eye, council amended the land use bylaw to have direct control over it and ensure the process is as public as possible.

According to the provincial Municipal Government Act, a public hearing is required before any amendments can be made to the land use bylaw. About 20 people appeared at a February public hearing on the change to direct control before council approved the amendment. Without direct control, the development could otherwise have been approved by the county's development officer, providing it met all requirements of the land use bylaw. No advertisement or public hearing would have been required.

Regan disagreed, however.

"We've eliminated any legal option for people," she said.

Normal procedure would allow anybody opposed to a development approved by the municipal development officer to go to the county's development appeal board, and beyond that, to the Court of Queen's Bench.

"Because there was controversy, council decided it needed direct control?"

Bouchard explained through this process, a public hearing is required.

"I'm not sure if this is apathy, a lack of interest or a lack of understanding," Regan said of the few people at the hearing. "Why now when the farmers, who are really the ones interested in this, are harvesting?"

County resident Bob Cheshire asked for further information regarding the allowable uses of the system. "Although I favour a trail system, I worry this is a permit to go out and do whatever."

"There's already regulations in place users must comply with," Bouchard said of municipal Off Highway Vehicle bylaws and provincial legislation also regulating use of the machines.

"This is an organized trail system with regulations," he said, adding the management of the trail system and such regulations were one of the most loudly voiced concerns raised by the public during the past three years the issue has been discussed.

"We heard it needed to be a managed trail system, that if Muni-Corr decided to develop anything, it has to be a managed, multi-use trail system," Bouchard said. "It's not going to be perfect. There's jerks out there. But we're going to give it our best shot."

Regan argued the concerns voiced over the past three years never included agricultural producers.

WE'VE COME A LONG WAY - Sheila Thompson of the Iron Horse Trail group and Riverland Recreational Trail Society showed off the spiffy new Iron Horse Trail display to Norm Brown at Elk Point's Information Night. The first step toward saving the abandoned railway line west of Elk Point as a recreational trail came at a meeting held at Brown's home some years ago. The name, Iron Horse Trail, originally referred to only the original portion of trail from Heinsburg to Elk Point, but now has been extended to the full 200-km length of the trail which will link communities across northeast Alberta.

Lakeland College partners with Lakeland RHA

Thirteen Practical Nurse students have been at the Elk Point Health Centre twice a week since the end of August utilizing the facility to gain practical nursing skills in a hospital setting. The students are pictured above during a lab with instructor Jennifer Szucs.

The students are enrolled in the Norquest brokered Practical Nurse program based at the Kehewin Cree Nation. "We're very grateful that the Lakeland RHA and Elk Point Health Centre allowed us to do this training at this facility. It's very beneficial for our students," said Alice Wainwright-Stewart, Dean of Lakeland College's School of Health and Human Services. The students will be at the Health Centre until the end of June.

Elk Point Trail Riders Snowmobile Club hosts Second Annual Landowners Appreciation Barbecue

Submitted by Elk Point Trail Riders

Although the weather earlier in the day looked questionable Mother Nature cooperated with a beautiful afternoon at the Elks Campsite on Kehewin Lake north of Elk Point as the Elk Point Trail Riders played host to 73 landowners and their families for an enjoyable get together and steak barbecue.

The meal which was sponsored by the snowmobile club was enjoyed by all attending. After the meal a presentation was made to outgoing secretary Mike Meyenberg, who has been transferred to Edson, Alberta, followed by the club president's welcome speech, where on behalf of club members he conveyed his gratitude to the landowners for permitting A.S.A. members to use their land.

The evening proceeded with a host of door prizes that were contributed by area business and individuals. Major prizes included five gas barbecues, donated by T&T Power Sports, Prime Oil Field, Kudu Industries, Corlac and Midfield Supply, which only signed landowners were eligible to win.

The remaining door prizes, which everyone present was eligible to win, were donated by A&J, Wilter Auto, the Brown family, Stanrick Construction, ATB Financial, Riders Connection, Power Merchants, CJ Petroleum and Wozniak Bulk Fuels.

During the evening, stories about the sport of snowmobiling past and present were shared around the fire as kids roasted marshmallows and neighbours chatted while everyone present hoped for lots of snow this winter for both the snowmobiles and the hay fields.

CLUB DIRECTOR Gary Brown presents landowner Hans Rohner with one of the five gas barbecues.

Muni-corr gets County approval

"All these groups that have come together, all these years, the farmers never were included, never invited as a group," she said. "This year the farmers are going to get $10 an acre in the middle of a drought. All the farmers that live on that line are going to have to police it. The truth is, you're expecting your farmers to police it and to be responsible for it and if you say otherwise, you're lying.

"In the whole process, people have been left by the wayside. There's not one adjacent landowner in this room. You're going to leave us holding the bag and there's a lot of damage in the county because of it."

Council further discussed the issue following the public hearing at its regular meeting.

Bouchard said a lot of landowners are now prepared to support the trail system. "I can hear (Regan), but I think there's a very large majority that are now in favour of it. As a representative of Muni-Corr, I'm very conscious of what's going on with landowners. There's a lot of umbrella groups out there that will be responsible for the trail, for the litter.

"I want to assure this council, Muni-Corr holds the permits and will lease to the umbrella groups, but Muni-Corr holds the permits and (the umbrella groups) can be shut down."

"Nobody in my area is really upset," counc. Don Mudryk said.

Sharil Baumgardner agreed. "I had two calls last year. One called back since and thanked me, said it was no problem"

Many of the nine other municipalities comprising the Muni-Corr group have either already approved similar development applications or will be considering them in the near future.

On Frozen Pond: it's maintenance time again at A. G. Ross Arena

doug BASSETT
Review Sports

Work bee. To be, or not to be? That is the question. O.K., Shakespeare, what is a work bee anyway?

Every year at this time we start to look at the yearly maintenance that is required to keep operating the good old A.G. Ross Arena. The time has come again. Every night from Monday to Thursday for the next two weeks there will be a work bee starting a 7 p.m. Stick on some old clothes, drag yourself off the couch for a few hours an see what it's all about. A little bit of painting, some repairs here and there to the boards, doors and floors and away we go, good to go for another season. So take a little time from your busy schedule to come down and help out. You'll be surprised how much satisfaction you receive in knowing you helped.

And just as a little reminder, for some of you who didn't make it last week, on this coming Thursday Sept-ember the 19th you can still register for hockey. Now even though the weather is still way too nice to play hockey, we all know that can change, two weeks from now the plant will be running and a few days later the ice should be in, and the puck drops.

And now it's time for the K.A. Campbell trivia question. Where were you in 1972? Thirty years ago this month Canada and Russia played the very first Summit Series. Everyone thought Canada would win eight games straight. Not so. After seven games, four in Canada and three in Russia, the series was tied. I was in my first year in Sheridan College, standing in the hallway watching it on overhead T. V., so was almost all the school.

Here's a test for the rest of you old enough to remember. Who played in net for Canada in the final game, game # 8 played in Russia, when Henderson scored the winner with only a few seconds left on the clock?

what's NEWS at the LIBRARY?

Exciting new materials for our youngest readers

By Daphne Schnurer
Librarian

Some of our youngest patrons are off to school for the first time, and are eager to learn to read. We have just the books to help them along, and if your child is beginning to read, this is a wonderful area of our library to check out. Our collection includes a number of new Easy-to-Read books .

Each Easy-to Read book has a color coded reading level to make book selection easy for parents and children. Because all children are unique in their reading development, three levels make it easy to find the right book to suit each child's reading readiness. Level 1 books have short, simple sentences full of word repetition, plus clear visual clues to help children take the first important steps toward reading. Level 2 has more words and longer sentences for children just beginning to read on their own. Level 3 has lively, fast-paced text , perfect for children who are reading on their own.

Also new in the children's area are... a new Arthur book... cassette storybooks for your child to read along... Little Miss Spider's ABC counting book... and Hooray for Wodney Wat, a story that subtly suggests that we all have our secret strengths.

It won't be long before the kids are deciding what to wear for Halloween. We have quite a range of Halloween materials , and the newest craft magazines are filled with fall and Halloween projects. We have some great books on making costumes, decorating pumpkins, face painting, and cookbooks with great fall treats.

Some of those treats are sure to be on hand Tuesday, October 1 at the Seniors' Tea - seniors, make sure to mark your calendar and join us for tea!

Crimes down, traffic stats up for first half of 2002

Elk Point RCMP's preliminary statistics for the first half of 2002 show a sizable decrease in assaults and break and enters, but substantial increases in collisions and provincial traffic offenses, Sgt. Lyle Marianchuk told the Elk Point and Area Community Advisory Policing Committee last week.

Assaults between January 1 and July 1 were down 25%, to nine from 12 for the same period of 2001, while break-and-enters dropping an amazing 82%, from 11 to two. Thefts remained the same, at 13 incidents each year, while Criminal ode offenses were down 24% from 62 to 47.

Traffic figures were not so impressive, with a 58% increase in collisions, from 12 in 2001 to 19 this year, with one injury collision involving pedestrians, 13 reportable property damage collisions and five collisions with damage under $1000. Provincial traffic offenses jumped by 55%, from 108 to 167, while Criminal Code traffic offenses were unchanged.

This was the first meeting for the CAPC after their summer break, and the group welcomed new representatives from F. G. Miller High School. A brief review of the summer showed a greatly successful STARS Golf Tournament, success with May long weekend patrols of campgrounds, and a relatively uneventful summer except for several incidents of paint vandalism. Sgt. Marianchuk said the persons responsible for graffiti on the Baptist Church and F. G. Miller High School had been apprehended and charged.

The CAPC briefly reviewed their focus and purpose, and discussed ways to boost attendance, including the possibility of holding evening meetings and/or inviting representatives from the major oil industry companies to attend.

Wining and dining without whining and pining

By Carol Moro
Take Off Pounds Sensibly

Ever notice that when you go out to eat, all your good intentions go out the window? It's definitely a challenge to stay sensible when dining out - but it's not impossible.

If you plan ahead, know what you're up against, and prepare yourself, you'll always be in control. Here are a few basic coping strategies you can use whenever you eat out.

First, plan ahead. Rehearse the coping strategy you will use. it could be something as simple as learning to say no - politely but firmly - when the appetizer tray gets passed around. It might involve being the first one in your party to order so you won't be swayed by the menu selection your dining partners make.

Remember that in any situation, you can pick and choose from a multitude of options. At one extreme is overindulgence, at the other is total abstinence. In between, there are many choices.

Deal with these choices one by one. Even better, think about these choices ahead of time. Decide whether or not to order an appetizer... what to drink... whether or not to order dessert.... how much food to enjoy on the spot vs. taking a portion home.

While you're making those choices, set realistic standards for yourself. The perfectionist goes out to a restaurant thinking, "I'll order a bowl of clear soup, a glass of iced tea, and that's it!" The smart diner says, "I really enjoy the baked potatoes they serve here, so I'll allow myself one of those, then pass up dessert to make sure I don't overdo it."

Another strategy to help you eat out without overindulging is to ask others to help you. Ask your dining companions to keep the breadbasket at the other end of the table if that's what it takes to keep you from constantly nibbling. Ask your spouse to stop urging you to order dessert or drinks when you don't really want them. Ask your server to bring your salad dressing on the side, or to leave the heavy sauce off your broiled fish, or whatever you prefer.

Here's a tip you've probably heard before, but it bears repeating: eat a light snack before you leave the house so you won't be ravenous later on. When you not under the influence of hunger pains, you'll make better choices.

Also, beware of drinking before dining. Alcoholic beverages are often high in calories. In addition, alcohol impairs your judgment and resolve. One good strategy is to drink seltzer before the meal, then enjoy your serving of wine or other beverage as you eat; having food in your stomach lessens the immediate impact of the alcohol.

So you see, it really is possible to enjoy wining and dining without whining and pining. So eat, drink, and yes - be merry!

For a free brochure on this subject, which includes detailed suggestions for smart food choices in restaurant, call 1-800-932-8677.
